

Deepak Baral

English 1001

Dr. R. Murdock

09-13-2019

Source Based Article Reflection.

Writing is an important factor and a very useful skill to have in life. We all have different style and different way of thinking about writing. Writing is not everyone's cup of tea. I am sure writing is not something many people would be interested because it requires much more in depth thinking, some level of research and general knowledge. Writing has become easier within past decades or so because of advancing tech. I believe writing has become more interesting because of advancing tech and that's because now, we don't have to hand write pages of papers. We also have online services to help with our researches which is much easier than having to go around and trying to find a book, article or some other sources.

Like I said earlier "writing isn't everyone's cup of tea". I am not into writing and it's probably because even though writing is very useful skill to have, it's not a skill that will be used daily in life. I don't know how good I really am when it comes to writing. I have had my own style of writing experiences. Personal essays or personal writing are my favorite because personal writing is expressing yourself. It's also expressing your life story in a way some others can relate to you. Another reason it's my favorite is because personal writing can be influencing in a positive vibe. It's basically a biography of yourself and if you have been through some hard struggle it can motivate others in a way that might help them face their reality of struggle.

My understanding about the audience has been the same since the first paper I wrote. To me, audience are the people who contributes their time and attention to your piece of art or work. And people who gives you feedback about your work to help yourself build better work next time. It's very important to keep the audience in mind while working on your piece because they're the one who decides if your piece is worth paying attention to. For Example: if you're making a movie, you will need to have script with good plot of comedy, action, drama or other genres because you can't just have comedy or action or drama by itself. Every paper I have written I have always had set of audience picked. The definition of an audience has been the same and the process of choosing my audiences has been the same as well. When I write a paper, I choose the audience depending on the requirement of the paper because I believe it's easier to keep the audiences in mind while writing the paper.

Genre hasn't been tough for me either because we witness it on everything we watch or read or listen to. Genre decides what kind of audiences your piece of work will have, so it's very important to choose what genre for your paper. Audiences are divided into many groups depending on the genres. So, if you want to get to more people, your paper must focus on genre that might target the bigger audience.

The rhetorical situational was something I wasn't really used to before I started college. I have always defined the term as an action taken to achieve some kid of set goal. I believe my understanding about the term has gained over the year because when I was a high school student I didn't know what the term meant and it's probably because I don't think I was taught what it meant. I think my understanding about the genre and audience are expanding because college has more advance learning method than high school.